POETRY

The Lonely Fox

A lonely fox ran away from home,
That poor little fox; all alone,
The fox gobbled up a thrush,
And the fox's owner came out in a rush,
And tried to make him spit out, said thrush,
But, alas, her attempts were futile; as the fox's mouth was taped shut,
She tried again, but to no avail,
It seemed that she was doomed to fail,
Feeling dejected, she carried the fox home,
Where he was left again; all alone.
